

13. There is more leisure time available today than most people know how to use; devoting some fraction of this leisure time to continuing education could do much to raise the level of civilization.

14. After the turbulence caused by Charles Darwin and Alfred Wallace had subsided and the central idea of natural selection had been grasped and accepted, we thought we knew everything essential about evolution.

15. I shrug my shoulders when people tell me that their first Impressions of a person are always right. I think they must have small insight or great vanity. For my own part I find that the longer I know people the more they puzzle me; my oldest friends are just those of whom I can say that I don't know anything about them.
